

Research USAID's Emergency-Development Nexus in Food Assistance

Project Title	Research USAID's Emergency-Development Nexus in Food Assistance
Project Summary	Research the 65-year effort of USAID's Office of Food for Peace to help vulnerable communities in developing countries graduate from short term disaster relief to longer term development support.
Country	United States
Country/Region of Focus	Global

Project Description

The nature of today's humanitarian crisis situations is increasingly complex, with humanitarian emergencies lasting longer and becoming more volatile and multifaceted. This has made it more difficult to transition vulnerable communities from short-term humanitarian relief to longer-term development. USAID's Office of Food for Peace has been working in both emergency and development sectors for more than six decades, and is looking to analyze the historic body of its efforts in this humanitarian to development space, to glean lessons learned and best practices on successfully transitioning families and communities off emergency assistance towards longer-term development. You will work closely with USAID's Food for Peace to Strategic Communications Team to conduct desk research, draft, write, and edit case studies.

Required Skills or Interests

Skill(s)
Analytical writing
Data analysis
Data visualization
Editing and proofreading
Research
Writing

Additional Information

We're looking for someone who loves research and writing! The ideal candidate would have some background in food security, agriculture, humanitarian assistance, or other relevant fields, and would be interested in exploring a career in international development. You will be the only intern working on this assignment, but will work closely with the specialists in the Office of Food for Peace.

Language Requirements

None